

Dear Jane Henney,

May 22, 2000

I encourage you to please support ^{#423} the movement to require safety testing and labeling of all foods that contain any sort of genetically modified organisms or by-products. The introduction of GMOs into our world is insane; it is especially monstrous to run an experiment on humans to see what effect GMOs in food may have (and all for the sake of corporate greed and power). The FDA must serve as a safety valve to stop such careless and unnecessary degradation of our food and environment. The precautionary principle must be used: new technologies and food changes must be proved safe by their manufacturers (and then labeled as such) before they are used in the market place. The FDA should not abdicate its role as watchdog.

Please listen to the concerns of consumers, farmers and those who care about the world we pass on to our children. Safety testing and immediate labeling of GMO foods are such obvious necessities. Thank you for your help.

Sincerely,

e625
Stephen Schott
Stephen Schott
867 Mingo Mtn. Rd.
Kettle Falls, WA 99141

Schoff
867MM
KF99141

Jane Henney
Commissioner, F.D.A.,
5630 Fishers Lane,
Room 1061 (HFA-305)
Docket No. OOP-1211/CPI

20857/0001

Rockville, MD 20852